

Consulting software service for SME change programmes

Launched in early 2007, Monetical is the first consulting software service, tailored for software and I.T. organisations and intended as an alternative to traditional management consulting. Embedded intellect from subject matter experts combined with unique analytical capabilities help programme owners reduce risk, exploit best practices and provides a holistic view of changes necessary to resources, applications, and processes necessary for them to complete their business change programmes quickly and efficiently.

Why it's needed?

Change programmes are increasingly complex; demanding a broader understanding of new subject matter expertise to successfully evaluate and execute all the appropriate actions necessary to generate quantified business benefits in a timely and cost effective manner. A distributed landscape and extremely high traditional consulting fees make it extremely difficult for small to medium sized organisations to gain access to the appropriate subject matter expertise throughout their entire change programme. As a consequence they lack the technical and commercial insight to plan and carryout all the necessary changes required to deliver a successful change programme.

What change programmes are supported?

Monetical provides dedicated support for change programmes that are undertaken by highly distributed organisations, these include:

- Distributed software development & I.T. project execution
- Reducing support and maintenance costs
- Market led strategic change
- Agile process adoption
- Improved commercial success

What makes it unique?

Supplied with the most comprehensive and relevant range of subject matter expertise, patent pending analytical capabilities enable programme managers to understand complex relationships, whilst online collaboration capabilities throughout the entire programme fuels effective-unbiased evaluation and decision-making leaving the organisation in complete control of their own programmes.
